Introduction

Daily Astorian newspaper
Jan. 14, 1888

"There should be an official record of all the deaths and births in this city and county for statistical and other purposes."

The Handy Book for Genealogists says death records since 1913 are available from the State Board of Health.
Many old cemetery records have disappeared and early mortuary records were lost in Astoria's disasterous fires. This book should help fill that gap. In some cases, it may give clues to family members and origins that would not show up on official forms.
Individual issues of some newspapers are missing in the microfilm. Some of these entries were found mixed in the news columns, with no other obituaries or death notices printed. The burial locations are not always named. Oceanview cemetery, which began burials in 1885, was originally named Clatsop County cemetery. This can be confused with Clatsop Plains cemetery, which is sometimes referred to as Skipanon. Some of the burials could have been at Hillside cemetery.(see Vol.I)
I have edited some of the longer pieces, trying to retain all genealogical information. These are marked (more). Other family connections have been cross referenced : McKean-see Huslter.

Not all these deaths occured in the local area. Some were reported because they had family here, or were brought here for burial. Therefore, this list is alphabetical, by surname.
Be sure to check the last three pages, which may or may not have an obit elsewhere in the book.
